

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PRINTED LITERATURE UPON VICTORIAN ABORIGINES.

By Aldo Massola, Curator of Anthropology, National Museum of Victoria.

INTRODUCTION.

This Bibliography, as the name suggests, deals only with printed literature (excluding newspapers) upon the Aborigines of Victoria. In some cases, however, as in the Monographs by D. S. Davidson, the original papers deal with the Natives of Australia as a whole. These have been included because they contain also Victorian material.

The present writer has seen most of the works here enumerated but some Rara Avis he has not seen are included because reference to them is made by reliable Authors.

A number of works have been omitted because their references to the Victorian Aborigines were too scanty, or of no scientific account. The Author hopes that nothing of any importance has been overlooked. If it has, he would be interested to hear about it.

The material has been presented in geographic and subject divisions, treated together and strictly alphabetically. Every item has been cross-referenced, and an Author Index, referring to the divisions, is added.

In dealing with any particular subject or locality, such as, say, Dartmoor, the user of this Bibliography must also remember that Dartmoor is on the Glenelg River, in the Western District, and that reference to it could also be found in works under General. The serious worker must consult all these divisions. In the case of General, this includes works dealing with Victorian subjects and localities as a whole, such as R. Brough Smyth's "Aborigines of Victoria", or A. W. Howitt's "Native Tribes of South-East Australia".

Smyth's work, as also E. M. Curr's "The Australian Race", have been dissected, as they contain papers by innumerable Authors.

I must acknowledge the great help rendered me by the Librarian of the National Museum of Victoria, Miss J. M. Shaw, B.A., who not only typed the entire proof, but re-checked almost every reference for proper rendering of Authors' names and dates. I must also thank the Officers of the Public Library of Victoria who have always given me every assistance. To all others who assisted in any way whatever my grateful thanks are offered.
